The Program

Each year over 750 U.S. faculty and professionals are awarded Fulbright grants to lecture or conduct research abroad. Grants range in duration from the full academic year to a semester or less.

About 80 percent of the awards are for university lecturing, usually in a field of importance to the host institution. Many lecturing awards allow opportunities for research, and research scholars may undertake occasional lecturing. Benefits for awards vary from country to country but generally include round-trip travel, basic health insurance, and maintenance allowances.

Most awards require the doctorate or terminal degree and appropriate professional experience. While English is acceptable for many assignments, fluency in a language is sometimes required. All applicants must be U.S. citizens.

The Directory

To acquaint academic communities at home and abroad with U.S. Fulbright scholars and their fields of specialization, the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES), which cooperates with the U.S. Department of State in administering the Fulbright Scholar Program, annually publishes this directory of U.S. Fulbright scholars.

The directory provides a comprehensive listing of grantees by academic discipline, which includes their home institutions, affiliations abroad, lecturing or research project titles, and dates of stay in the host country. Scholars are also listed in separate indexes arranged alphabetically, by home state, and by host geographic area. U.S. scholars participating in short-term seminars—the Fulbright German Studies Seminar, U.S.-Germany International Education Administrators Program, U.S.-Japan International Education Administrators Program, and U.S.-Korea International Education Administrators Program—are also listed.

Academic and professional communities may better understand how the Fulbright Program carries out its goals by reading the brief descriptions of U.S. scholar experiences included in this year's directory after the introduction. These descriptions, or "scholar stories," illustrate the accomplishments of U.S. scholars abroad.

Grants for some 1999–2000 scholars will not be confirmed until after this directory is published. The names of these scholars will appear in the next edition—just as scholars who received grants but were not listed in the 1998–99 edition appear in this directory beginning on page 123. An updated listing of 1999–2000 U.S. scholars will be posted online at www.cies.org in early 2000.

The National Competition

U.S. scholars and other professionals interested in university lecturing and advanced research abroad are encouraged to visit CIES online at www.cies.org or contact CIES at the address below.

U.S. SCHOLAR STORIES: EXPERIENCES ABROAD

Included in this year's directory are just a few examples of how the Fulbright Scholar Program has benefitted the U.S. faculty and professionals who have received grants as well as their home and host institutions. The scholars routinely express how personally and professionally rewarding their experiences lecturing or researching abroad were. Institutions hosting scholars have been equally pleased with how much their visitors have been able to share with their students, faculty, and communities—from cultural details about the United States to technical expertise in a variety of fields as diverse as African American history, human rights law, and nursing.

The goals of the Fulbright Program are carried out each year through these exchanges. Below are just a few stories that illustrate how this was accomplished in 1998–99.

- A California State University–Fullerton professor of geography spent several months in Brazil in spring 1999 cataloging the plant knowledge of indigenous peoples. A 1985 alumnus of the Fulbright Student Program, the scholar taught undergraduate and graduate courses at the Universidade Federal da Bahia and then spent 3 months exploring the Amazon and studying the ethnobotanical knowledge of tropical forest healers. With acres of South American rain forest disappearing daily, it is becoming increasingly important to collect this information before it disappears.
- Easing ethnic strife between the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities was the goal of a University of California–Irvine law lecturer's recent 2-year Fulbright assignment in Cyprus. The scholar's initial intent was to serve as a lecturer and consultant in domestic violence conflict resolution. After completing his first session, however, he found himself in demand for training in conflict management related to the island's larger political and social situation. During his term, the scholar conducted 24 such training programs, gave numerous presentations and lectures, participated in conferences, and attempted to revitalize bicomunal groups.

As bicomunal activities on the island had been banned since December 1997, the scholar secured additional funding to take groups off the island. One of the most successful of these activities occurred in July 1998 with a group of 50 people who traveled to Oslo, Norway, for an intensive 1-week training program in peace-building efforts. The Cypriots who participated composed a draft of shared values and suggestions for a peaceful solution to the situation in Cyprus. The members of this group are now considered the front runners of the bicomunal movement in Cyprus.
- During his 6-month grant at an HIV clinic in Guatemala, an assistant professor at Albert Einstein College of Medicine attempted to alleviate the suffering of impoverished HIV and AIDS patients. For 3 years before his grant, the scholar had been spending his spare time locating recycled HIV medicines to send to the clinic, and his Fulbright grant allowed him to see first hand the difference these shipments made. Many of his patients had difficulty paying even small sums for the medicines they desperately needed to keep themselves alive—and many would die as a result. In response to this need for more medication, the scholar assisted the clinic and local AIDS organizations in establishing an HIV medicine bank, which will more efficiently collect donated medicines and distribute them, free of charge, to HIV-positive patients at the two major public hospitals in Guatemala City.
- A major contribution to health care in India was made by a professor of special education from Old Dominion University who spent 4 months helping to develop an institution-wide curriculum for children with severe and multiple disabilities. She also worked with teachers to set up an early intervention unit for children from birth to age 6, the first in India, and held workshops for the Spastics Society of Calcutta.
- A William and Mary professor, a specialist in African American and Southern history, spent the year at Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Israel, teaching a graduate seminar on slaves and free blacks and an undergraduate course on the American civil rights movement. The scholar's grant reflected the growing interest of Israeli scholars in American studies and, in particular, African American history. This interest, the Fulbrighter explained, lies in Israel's attempt to confront the increasing diversity of its own society and the shifts in the political and economic power wielded by the nation's different ethnic communities. The scholar believes that the United States

- provides many lessons, both positive and negative, of use to Israel as it learns to adapt to changes in its ethnic and social makeup.
- While teaching at Yonsei University Severance Medical School and Catholic University Medical School in Korea, the editor-in-chief of the American Journal of Health Promotion introduced students and faculty to the concept of health promotion and transferred the skills with which to design such programs. In addition, he collaborated with Yonsei deans and professors to establish an employee health promotion program; if successful, it will be the first of its kind in Korea and serve as a model for the rest of the nation's universities and workplaces. The grantee advocated a more healthy Korean workplace by launching a Smoke Free Workplace Campaign, which the Korean Association for Smoking and Health adopted as its primary project for the year. The campaign was linked to the idea that Koreans could reduce health care costs by engaging in healthier lifestyles. He also designed a series of studies that he hopes will show Korea's insurance industry the relationship between high medical care costs and high-risk behaviors like smoking and overeating as well as illustrate the importance of the industry's participation in health promotion programs. During his assignment, the scholar worked closely with his Korean counterparts to create a resource center of materials donated by U.S. program developers. Further, he established solid links between the university and foreign companies that would be interested in contributing financially to a health promotion campaign for the future.
 - The editor/publisher of the Portland, IN, newspaper The Commercial Review spent much of his 4-month lecturing grant to Moldova combining classroom instruction with numerous professional activities in the journalism community. He taught well-attended and highly successful courses at Moldova State University on the role of a free press in an open society and consulted with various regional newspapers, the most independent media in the country, at a critical stage in their early development. He also worked closely with the Independent Journalism Center, the key organization working to train and foster an independent press in Moldova, and assisted with the development of the center's strategic plan.
 - Nepal was the site of crucial work in the field of paleontology in 1998–99. A paleontologist and physical anthropologist from the California Academy of Sciences greatly rewarded her host country by doubling its fossil holdings and adding significant data to the country's geological records. During her 5-month grant, the scholar taught vertebrate paleontology at Tribhuvan University and conducted field research. It was during the latter that the scholar's team discovered more than 1,500 fossils of ancient mammals and reptiles, which date back between 3 and 10 million years. According to the scholar, this fossil evidence will help explain the dramatic climactic changes that occurred as the Himalayas rose. Among the findings were species such as the hippopotamus, the one-horned Asian rhinoceros, and the crocodile.
 - An English professor from New Mexico Junior College spent her 1998–99 grant to Norway working as a roving American studies specialist for the Norwegian Ministry of Education. In that capacity, she traveled all over the country, speaking to teachers, students, and administrators at a different school nearly every day. She also spoke at several conferences and made a well-received presentation at the Norwegian Fulbright Commission's 50th anniversary celebration.
 - An environmental engineer from Cleveland State University spent his grant in Kazan, Russia, finding a better way to treat biological waste. A well-regarded and productive scholar, he was affiliated with the Engineering Ecology Department, the Applied Ecology Department, and the Biotechnology Center at Kazan State University. Because one of the most significant heritages of the Soviet system was ecological devastation, the grantee's work was highly regarded not only in Kazan, but in a number of other cities where he lectured. In an unusual addition to his Russian grant, he has traveled to Bishkek to do similar work in Kyrgyzstan, an area with comparable, if not more pressing, environmental degradation.
 - A widely recognized authority on Russian and American literature from Skidmore College spent her grant in Russia at the Jewish University of St. Petersburg, an institution that has hosted two previous Fulbright scholars and to which there has been an ongoing commitment to support academic growth. Best known as an innovative teacher and interpreter of both prose and poetry, the scholar lectured on the quest for national identity by Russian and American Jewish authors, drawing parallels and contrasts between two elements of a major diaspora community. In 1991, the Fulbright Program introduced the first professor to teach Jewish history in Moscow since Stalin's purges; the 1998-99 scholar's placement was part of a continuing effort to reintroduce Jewish history in Russia.

- During his grant to Senegal, a professor of economics at Swarthmore College not only taught at Cheikh Anta Diop University of Dakar, but also served as a consultant on a World Bank project to devise a strategic plan for developing the country's private sector, which planners considered essential to lowering Senegal's substantial unemployment rate. The plan was presented at a national seminar in late April, which was chaired by the U.S. ambassador to Senegal, Dane Smith, and the nation's president, Abdou Diouf.
- The National Institute of the Arts in Taiwan hosted a 1998-99 theater grantee from Winthrop University in South Carolina. The scholar, an associate professor of theater and a specialist in American musical theater, comedy, and directing, had a very dynamic year. In addition to establishing new graduate courses at the institute in her areas of specialization, she offered a workshop on performing Shakespeare, presented a number of lectures and demonstrations throughout the country, collaborated with other Fulbrighters and local theater groups to direct the box office success "All in the Timing," and worked with a Taiwanese Fulbrighter to produce an English translation of the latter's play "The Bride and Her Double." Having developed an excellent rapport with her students and colleagues in Taiwan, the scholar was invited back to direct the institute's summer theater. As a result of her grant, she intends to introduce courses on Asian theater into the Winthrop curriculum in the 1999-2000 academic year.
- A Uganda grantee from North Carolina Central University made a special trip to South Africa as a short-term guest lecturer in fall 1998. A professor of criminal justice and former Washington, DC, police officer, the scholar presented a paper at the International Conference for Crime Prevention Partnerships and then spent several days working with police officers, social workers, crime prevention NGOs, and community leaders. He also spoke with law faculty and students at Vista University in Soweto and Rand Afrikaans University in Johannesburg and the staff of the Center for the Study of Violence and Reconciliation. Many of these groups were discouraged by the apparent ineffectiveness of their previous efforts. The grantee was able to help identify problems and offer alternative strategies.

ADMINISTRATION AND FUNDING OF THE FULBRIGHT PROGRAM

The Fulbright Program is authorized by Public Law 87-256, the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, as amended. The purpose of the program is "to enable the government of the United States to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries . . . and thus to assist in the development of friendly, sympathetic, and peaceful relations between the United States and other countries of the world." The primary source of funding is an annual appropriation made by the Congress to the United States Department of State. Participating governments and host institutions in many countries and in the United States also contribute financially through cost-sharing, as well as by indirect support such as salary supplements, tuition waivers, university housing, and other benefits.

Grants are made to U.S. citizens and nationals of other countries for a variety of educational activities, primarily university lecturing, advanced research, graduate study, and teaching in elementary and secondary schools. Grants for foreign nationals are available through the binational Fulbright commission/foundation or U.S. Embassy in the country of citizenship. The Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence (SIR) Program and European Union SIR Program also provide opportunities for U.S. institutions to host visiting lecturers.

The J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board, composed of 12 educational and public leaders appointed by the President of the United States, has statutory responsibility under the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (Fulbright-Hays Act), as amended, for the selection of all Fulbright grantees and the supervision of the Fulbright Program worldwide, including the formulation of policy guidelines governing such exchanges.

The United States Department of State, Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, develops policies to assure fulfillment of the purposes of the program and administers it with the assistance of binational educational commissions and foundations in some 51 countries that have executive agreements with the United States for continuing exchange programs, United States Embassies in 89 other countries, and a number of cooperating agencies in the United States.

The binational Fulbright commissions and foundations establish the numbers and categories of grants, based on the annual commission/foundation program proposal and on their consultations with local universities; review applications of nominated U.S. participants and arrange or confirm their academic affiliations; make travel arrangements for grantees and their families; and provide orientations and facilitative services. In a country without a commission or foundation, the Public Affairs Section of the U.S. Embassy develops the program and supervises it locally.

The Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES), affiliated with the Institute of International Education, is a private organization that facilitates international exchange in higher education. Under a cooperative agreement with the United States Department of State, CIES assists in the administration of the Fulbright Scholar Program for faculty and professionals.
