CAMPUS PERSPECTIVES

“Dr. Liu established a friendly rapport with our director of Asian Studies, Dr. Claudia Ross, and he regularly made himself available to students for conversation in Chinese and discussions of Chinese history and culture. He also attended campus lectures on Chinese-related topics, where he participated in discussion and enriched the experience for all involved. In short, Dr. Liu established his presence on campus, and he contributed very generously and helpfully to intellectual life at the college. My colleagues and our students benefitted from the presence of a highly intelligent, very hard-working man, whose humor and gentleness touched everyone he came in contact with.”

“There was huge impact on our campus alone. American students gained insight and understanding about Islam through the warmth and scholarship of Dr. Radi. Dr. Radi was also able to interact with cultural agencies—impacting their staff and the constituencies they serve.”

Diane Douglas, Director of Center for Liberal Arts, Bellevue Community College

“Maeve Walls was a highly valued member of our intellectual and social community during her visit. She participated in a wide variety of community events and met with a very large number of government officials, both here in Philadelphia and around the country. We hope that she found these conversations useful in furthering her own professional work. We certainly enormously benefitted from her presence ... send us more people like Maeve.”

Donald F. Kettl, Professor, Department of Political Science, University of Pennsylvania

“My department and the College as a whole benefitted enormously from Sachi Mohanty’s presence. He was a wonderful addition to the faculty, teaching courses that were very successful with the students. Sachi repeatedly said that he was here to learn from the students as much as to teach them, and that openness was a hall mark of his tenure in the department of his success with the students.”

Joan Dagle, Professor, English Department, Rhode Island College

INTRODUCTION

The approximate 800 Fulbright Visiting Scholars who come to the United States each year provide a valuable resource for campuses and communities throughout the United States. All of the Fulbright Visiting Scholars are available to make subsidized, short-term, guest-lecturing visits to colleges and universities through the Occasional Lecturer Program. The enclosed directory is designed to offer assistance in the identification of individuals who will be able to share their academic expertise as well as insights into their countries and cultures.

As a comprehensive resource for the Fulbright Occasional Lecturer Program, this directory provides a cross-indexed listing of most of the 2006-2007 Fulbright Visiting Scholars and provides instructions on how to request a Scholar to visit your campus or community under the Occasional Lecturer Program.

The complete list of Scholars, including those confirmed after this directory's publication, is available online at www.cies.org. Also on the Web site is comprehensive information on the Fulbright Visiting Scholar Program. You can request a brochure on the program from scholars@cies.iie.org or by calling 202.686.8664.

We urge you to take advantage of the Fulbright Visiting Scholar Program. Contact any of the staff listed on the inside front cover of this directory for additional information.

Occasional Lecturer Program

The Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES) provides travel awards through the Fulbright Occasional Lecturer Program (OLP), which enables Fulbright Visiting Scholars to accept guest-lecturing invitations at colleges and universities. OLP Awards are granted at three different levels depending upon the distance traveled. CIES will determine the award amounts.

The program enables Scholars to

- share their specific research interests;
- speak on the history and culture of their countries;
- exchange ideas with U.S. students, faculty and community organizations;
- become better acquainted with U.S. higher education; and
- create linkages between their home and host institutions.

Arranging an Occasional Lecturer Visit. If you find a Scholar in the directory whom you would like to invite to your campus, you may contact the Scholar via the faculty associate and department provided. You may also contact CIES staff to obtain an e-mail address. (See the staff listing on the inside of the front cover.)

OLP Awards are provided directly to the participating Scholar. To apply for an award, the Scholar must submit to CIES a formal letter of invitation from the host institution or organization, along with dates of travel, at least one month before the visit is to take place. (If possible, Scholars are asked to submit their requests even further in advance.) Within one week of receiving the application, CIES will inform the Scholar whether the award has been approved. The Scholar is responsible for purchasing an airline ticket or arranging some other means of transportation, such as a train, bus or rental car. After the visit, the Fulbrighter will receive the award.

Multiple Occasional Lecturer Visits and Visits to Minority-Serving Institutions. Due to limited funding, each Scholar is eligible for only one trip; however, requests to visit more than one institution on a single trip will be considered. An exception to the one-trip rule may be made if the Scholar is invited to guest lecture at minority-serving colleges and universities. Additional monies are available to Scholars visiting these institutions.

Responsibilities of Institutions and Organizations Hosting Occasional Lecturers.

Institutions wishing to host a Fulbright Visiting Scholar should develop a comprehensive plan of activities and arrangements to share with the Scholar well in advance of the proposed visit. Host institutions are asked to provide Occasional Lecturers with local transportation, accommodations and meals.

It is important to inform the Scholar, prior to arrival, about the support the host institution or organization will provide. Institutions should also provide the Scholar with a formal letter of invitation as early as possible. The Scholar will need this letter to formally request travel funds from CIES.

Length of Visit. The length of the lecturer's stay at the institution will depend upon the particular interests of the academic community or organization and the facilities available. The period, however, should allow an opportunity for the Scholar to become acquainted with the host institution or organization. A program of two to three days is suggested; a longer period may be advisable if visits to several institutions are planned.

Suggested Activities for Occasional Lecturers.

Fulbright Visiting Lecturers have engaged in the following activities in the past:

- department- or school-wide lectures to students and/or faculty,
- lectures in classrooms where the Scholar can make a contribution to the discipline,
- faculty meetings that allow for an exchange of ideas,
- informal gatherings of students and faculty,
- home hospitality offered by the faculty or department host, and
- presentations to community organizations or religious groups that have a special interest in international relations and/or the scholar's field of study.

Occasional Lecturer Stories

The following are examples of the many ways campuses, communities and Fulbright Visiting Scholars have benefitted from the Occasional Lecturer Program:

Prema Kandaka Subba Rao's occasional lecturer visit gave her an opportunity to visit the University of Washington in Seattle. As a speech and hearing specialist from India pursuing research on the prevention of language-based learning disabilities, Rao addressed two audiences: one comprising students and faculty, and the other research scientists. Rao gave two talks titled, "Bilingualism—The Challenges for Assessment and Management" and "Reading Acquisition and Disorders—Does East Meet West?"

During her talks, Rao endeavored to place India's clinical and research needs in a global perspective, stressing the need for international collaboration. Discussion was centered on how “universality” in reading theories and models is not acceptable given the differences in languages and scripts with many scientists from South Asian countries understanding that it is crucial to investigate these issues. Rao hopes that continued networking with these and other interested researchers will pave the way for international collaboration and research

As a Fulbright Scholar at Fairfield University in Connecticut, Marcos A. Pedlowski was invited to visit two U.S. institutions through the Fulbright Occasional Lecturer Program. The Brazilian spoke on the synergisms between social inequality, models of resource utilization and global climate change. During his visits to the University of North Florida in Jacksonville and to the University of La Verne (an Hispanic-serving institution in southern California), he experienced what he describes as “moments of profound out-of-classroom interaction with both faculty and students.”

Both OLP experiences exposed Pedlowski to unique efforts in building bridges to enhance the understanding of society’s impact on the planet. More importantly, they provided the opportunity to open dialogue and increase international cooperation through higher education programs at both institutions. He was also able to establish personal connections that he hopes will lead to future exchange programs between his host institutions and home institution in Brazil. “I believe that OLP makes the Fulbright experience even more far reaching. The benefits of OLP go beyond the personal gains obtained by visiting a single institution in the United States.”

OLP hosts California State University—San Marcos and Chestnut Hill College in Pennsylvania provided Ibtesam Moh’d Abdel Rahman Al Atiyat with the opportunity to extend her interaction with the American community. Al Atiyat spent her occasional lecturer visits speaking at several community colleges and meeting women’s groups in San Diego County. The Jordanian scholar gave presentations in both English and German, sharing her experience on women and Islam.

During one of her lectures in Philadelphia, one faculty member reminded Al Atiyat that women can relate to one another in many ways regardless of cultural context. Al Atiyat believes that this kind of shared experience can be used to promote cultural understanding. Al Atiyat says her occasional lecturer experience proved a tremendous success. “People appreciated me so much that I was invited to lecture everywhere one could ever imagine: a museum, a library, a church, etc. It was a great time. I wish it never ended.”

Visiting Scholar Stories

Occasional Lecturers are drawn from a larger pool of Fulbright Visiting Scholars who are awarded individual grants to the United States as Fulbright researchers and/or lecturers. These Fulbright Visiting Scholars express routinely how personally and professionally gratifying their Fulbright experiences have been, whether they are here for only a few months or a full academic year. Institutions hosting these Scholars are equally pleased with how much their visitors are able to share with their students and faculty, from cultural details about their home countries to technical expertise in a variety of disciplines as diverse as astrophysics, music and literature. These stories are just a few examples of successful recent visits. To read more Scholar stories, visit our Web site at www.cies.org.

Africa

Visiting Scholar Lenah Nakhone's only regret is that she didn't explore research opportunities in the United States earlier in her career. "In my heart, I think I should have come here ten years ago," she says. "It would have made a lot of difference in my academic life in Kenya, but it's never too late."

While at Iowa State University, Nakhone made good use of her time as she conducted research—as part of the Fulbright Visiting Scholar's Africa Research Program—with one of the leading soil chemistry and biochemistry experts toward developing inexpensive residue and chemical supplements to fertilizer.

As a scientist, she also made an effort to examine U.S. academic structure, U.S. culture and American values. Of particular interest to Nakhone, who is a member and organizer of several women's organizations, was learning how U.S. women handle societal pressures compared to Kenyan women. "The issues are the same but the approach is different," explains Nakhone. For her, learning different ways of solving the same problem opens horizons and offers much to consider.

East Asia and the Pacific

Ming-Yu Cheng, a Fulbright Visiting Scholar who specializes in economics and Association of Southeast Asian Nations studies, believes the reasons behind successful economic growth are sharing and trust. "Countries with very high social capital can develop very fast," she says. "If you have civic engagement, if you trust each other or you can establish a trust, then you can help the economy develop." To outline a more comprehensive model of how civic societies are linked to economic development, Cheng welcomed the availability of economic data at her host institution, Washington State University. Cheng hopes her analysis of the data will allow her to help Malaysia better understand the importance of civic society and a transparent economy.

In studying economic development, Cheng recognizes the importance of cross-cultural exchange, saying that people who travel see things from many perspectives and more readily accept new ideas. Exchanges such as the Fulbright Scholar Program allow people to better understand one another. Cheng encourages others to use Fulbright and other travel and international exchange opportunities as a tool for developing social trust.

Eurasia

Sergiy Zibtsev visited as many natural reserves and forests as he could during his 10-month Fulbright award in the United States. The environmental scientist, hosted at Yale University, collected digital images of forests as he crisscrossed the country, published several papers, developed relationships with colleagues, and gave several presentations on forestry and Ukraine. Zibtsev was also able to gain insight on common forestry interests between the United States and Ukraine, such as development of recreational services while maintaining preservation.

Being in the United States for the first time, Zibtsev was thrilled with the openness of the American people. "As a result of the numerous interactions with others, many 'walls' and dogmas were broken in my mind," he comments. Zibtsev's family was changed by the Fulbright experience as well. His wife and his school-aged children all agree that the American landscape is beautiful and that the people are welcoming toward foreigners.

Europe

“I think my visit to the United States infected me with optimism and encouraged me to be more creative and effective in my work,” says Matyas Havrda. The Czech religious studies scholar spent a year conducting research on the heterodox background of Christian philosophy in the early Roman period at Claremont Graduate University’s Institute for Antiquity and Christianity (IAC).

At IAC, a leading research center in heterodox Christianity, Havrda allowed his intellectual curiosity to roam in the well-equipped, easily accessed resource libraries. Outside of the institute, he engaged in a number of events, including conferences and lectures. These interactions ranked among the many pleasant surprises for Havrda. “U.S. professors seemed to be genuinely interested in giving me every possibility to express myself,” says Havrda. A great benefit to Havrda was the chance to receive both comments and criticism from his colleagues, including many leading experts in the field, on his views and research. “The Fulbright experience is invaluable, both professionally and personally, and I am sincerely grateful for it,” he says.

The Middle East and North Africa

Ikram Ahmed Ibrahim Elsherif’s Fulbright experience proved to be a memorable one. Flying in from Egypt to her Chicago apartment, Elsherif visited several Native American reservations as she embraced the Fulbright experience.

At the Newberry Library where she was affiliated, Elsherif was met with smiles and helpful assistance as she conducted research on Native American culture and literature. She attended seminars and workshops and visited Native American art exhibitions and powwows. She was also introduced to a professor who was planning to visit Egypt and received several invitations to participate in panels and classes. Professionally, Elsherif was busy and contented, but socially, she felt a bit isolated.

A delightful turn of events came by way of an unexpected break in her water pipe. Elsherif found herself surrounded by sympathetic neighbors who heard about her situation. These neighbors, who were from multicultural backgrounds, soon became Elsherif’s close friends and introduced her to an authentic American experience filled with dinner parties and conversations from the highly academic to the mundane. “In addition to the academic advantage of consulting libraries, interviewing people, and meeting with specialists in my field, I found the American people I met, with few exceptions, whatever their ethnic, racial, cultural or religious affiliations, on the individual and human level very receptive and always willing to meet me half way.”

South Asia

Sharmistha Banerjee came to the United States and found that Americans are concerned with more than just business. While lecturing on small business management and entrepreneurship at Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania, Banerjee was pleasantly surprised to teach a student with speech disabilities. She was moved by the social support systems such as sign language translators, disability ramps and reserved handicapped parking spaces.

Seeing this network of social support first hand left an indelible impression on Banerjee. The India native describes her Fulbright as “a truly thought-provoking lesson in the spontaneous efforts that make meaningful differences to people’s lives.”

While on her grant, Banerjee wore a sari as a method of introducing Americans to Indian culture. This proved particularly helpful during her talks at a local elementary school and business institute. The Americans proved as curious about her culture as she was of theirs. Banerjee hopes that she was able to leave as much of an impression on the people she met as they did on her.

Western Hemisphere

Derek Chadee boldly set off to the City University of New York—Hunter College from the West Indies to continue his research on the social psychology of fear and crime. Chadee’s research started at the University of West Indies—St. Augustine where he replicated a cross-cultural study of fear of crime done by his faculty associate at Hunter College. Once Chadee arrived in the United States, he was prepared to compare and analyze the data with his colleague.

Taking full advantage of every opportunity to further his research and enable future collaboration, Chadee participated in a number of seminars, visited many institutions, and met with leaders and experts in his field. The experiences provided him with a better understanding of life in metropolitan areas such as New York, a much different locale than the Caribbean. Learning about life in the Big Apple also gave Chadee a more comprehensive understanding of much of the literature on the fear of crime, most of which is placed in an American context. When not concentrating on his research, Chadee enjoyed the company of his colleagues and was invited to watch football games, a Thanksgiving dinner and Christmas parties.

The Visiting Specialists Program: Direct Access to the Muslim World is designed to enrich understanding of Islamic peoples and civilizations by individuals in the United States. This is done by providing an opportunity for U.S. higher education institutions that lack resources in these fields to host specialists from predominantly Islamic countries for a short-term intensive lecturing, community outreach and consulting program. The Visiting Specialists come from the Middle East, North Africa, South Asia and several countries in the Balkans, Central Asia, Southeast Asia and Sub-Saharan Africa. They lecture in classes and in communities, work closely with the U.S. faculty hosts to improve curriculum and develop continuing institutional relationships.

ADMINISTRATION AND FUNDING OF THE FULBRIGHT SCHOLAR PROGRAM

The flagship international educational exchange program sponsored by the U.S. Government, widely known as the Fulbright Program, is designed to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries. With this goal as a starting point, the Fulbright Program has provided more than 273,000 participants—chosen for their leadership potential—with the opportunity to observe each others' political, economic and cultural institutions, exchange ideas and embark on joint ventures of importance to the general welfare of the world's inhabitants. Currently, the Program operates in over 150 countries worldwide.

The Fulbright Program was established in 1946 under legislation introduced by former Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas. The Fulbright Program is administered by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the United States Department of State.

Since the establishment of the Program, approximately 46,100 Fulbright Visiting Scholars have conducted research or taught in U.S. universities, and approximately 44,400 Fulbright U.S. Scholars have engaged in similar activities abroad. The Fulbright Program awards approximately 800 grants to Visiting Scholars each year.

The primary source of funding for the Fulbright Program is an annual appropriation made by the United States Congress to the Department of State. Participating governments and host institutions in foreign countries and in the United States also contribute financially through cost-sharing and indirect support, such as salary supplements, tuition waivers and university housing. The Congressional appropriation for the Fulbright Program in fiscal year 2005 was $155.3 million. Foreign governments, through binational commissions or foundations, contributed an additional $42.6 million directly to the Fulbright Program.

The J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board (FSB), composed of 12 educational and public leaders appointed by the President of the United States, formulates policy for the administration of the program, establishes criteria for the selection of candidates and approves candidates nominated for awards.

The United States Department of State, Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs develops policies to assure fulfillment of the purposes of the Program and administers it with the assistance of binational commissions and foundations in 50 countries, United States Embassies in 90 other countries and a number of cooperating agencies in the United States.

Binational commissions and foundations draw up the annual program plan for exchanges, in consultation with participating universities and organizations in the host country. They also screen, interview and recommend to the FSB qualified candidates for student and faculty grants. In a country without a commission or foundation, the Public Affairs Section of the U.S. Embassy develops the program and supervises it locally.

The Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES), under a cooperative agreement with the Department of State, administers the Fulbright Scholar Program for faculty and professionals. CIES is a division of the Institute of International Education (IIE) and has close working relationships with the major disciplinary bodies in the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences. During the terms of their grants in the United States, Fulbright Scholars are assisted by CIES.

Internationalize Your Campus Through the Fulbright Occasional Lecturer Program

The Occasional Lecturer Program (OLP) provides travel awards to Fulbright Visiting Scholars for round-trip transportation, which enables scholars to accept short-term guest lecturing invitations at colleges and universities.

Occasional lecturers

- offer department- or school-wide lectures to students and/or faculty;
- give lectures in classrooms where the Scholar can make a contribution to the discipline;
- enjoy home hospitality offered by the faculty or department host; and
- address community organizations or religious groups that have a special interest in international relations and/or the scholar's field of study.

Every Fulbright Visiting Scholar is eligible for one OLP trip. Scholars who visit institutions that serve predominantly minority-student populations are eligible for more trips.

The Fulbright Visiting Scholar Directory lists Visiting Scholars who are in the United States for the current academic year. Use this listing to find and extend invitations to Scholars whose research or lecturing topics are of interest to your institution. The directory is also available online at www.cies.org.

For additional information on the Occasional Lecturer Program, please visit www.cies.org/sir/olp.htm, call 202.686.6235 or send an e-mail message to olp@cies.iie.org.
